Community Foundation for Randolph County awards local grants

For immediate release -- 9/21/16

The board of advisors of the Community Foundation for Randolph County announces local grant awards from its community grantmaking fund, according to Chris Griffin, board president.

This year's nonprofit recipients include:

- 100 Man Project Inc. for C.A.R.S. vehicle maintenance
- Randolph County Family Crisis Center, Inc for Clothing Closet 24/7 for domestic violence and sexual assault victims
- Asheboro Shelter of Hope for renovation of facility for homeless shelter

Griffin thanked the community for its support of the Community Foundation for Randolph County. "These grants are important to our community and our quality of life," he said. "Critical programs would not be possible without the generosity of many individuals and organizations that have supported Randolph County's community fund."

About the Community Foundation for Randolph County

The Community Foundation for Randolph County is an affiliate of the North Carolina Community Foundation (NCCF). In addition to Griffin, board members include: James Gouty, Mark Hensley, Kevin Franklin, Kim Markham, Mac Pugh, Darwin Smith, Wayne Thomas and Mike Whitehead.

About the North Carolina Community Foundation

The NCCF is the single statewide community foundation serving North Carolina and has made $116 million in grants since its inception in 1988. With more than $222 million in assets, NCCF sustains 1,200 endowments established to provide long-term support of a broad range of community needs, nonprofit organizations, institutions and scholarships. The NCCF partners with a network of affiliate foundations to provide local resource allocation and community assistance across the state. An important component of NCCF's mission is to ensure that rural philanthropy has a voice at local, regional and national levels.
