

Novels joins NC Community Foundation as regional director in Northern Piedmont

For immediate release -- 10/24/16

Quinn Novels has joined the North Carolina Community Foundation as regional director for the Northern Piedmont, according to Sally Migliore, director of community leadership.

Novels has management responsibilities for NCCF's affiliate foundations in Cary, Franklin, Granville, Johnston, Vance and Wake counties. She helps develop and support the boards' work to grow philanthropy, build endowments and administer local grantmaking in their counties. She also works with NCCF's Women's Giving programs: the Women's Network of Wake County, the Cary Women's Network and co-directs The Art of Giving, a collaboration with the Triangle Community Foundation.

NCCF has eight regional directors who oversee affiliate activities in regions that serve the state.

Novels comes to NCCF with a strong background in donor engagement with individuals and companies and nonprofit board training. She received her master's degree in international development from Tulane University, her bachelor's degree in finance from the University of Delaware and her Certificate in Nonprofit Management from Duke University.

"We are delighted to have someone with Quinn's experience in the key area of donor relations and board development join the NCCF team," said Migliore.

About the North Carolina Community Foundation

The NCCF is the single statewide community foundation serving North Carolina and has made $116 million in grants since its inception in 1988. With more than $222 million in assets, NCCF sustains 1,200 endowments established to provide long-term support of a broad range of community needs, nonprofit organizations, institutions and scholarships. The NCCF partners with a network of affiliate foundations to provide local resource allocation and community assistance across the state. An important component of NCCF's mission is to ensure that rural philanthropy has a voice at local, regional and national levels.
