

North Carolina Community Foundation begins allocating from its Disaster Relief Fund to support Hurricane Matthew victims

Sampson County awarded more than $3,000 in local dollars

Raleigh -- The North Carolina Community Foundation continues to allocate grants from the NCCF Disaster Relief Fund to support recovery efforts related to Hurricane Matthew and flooding in affected areas of the state, according to Rodney E. Martin, chair of NCCF's grants committee and a statewide board member.

The Eastern Baptist Association received $3,750 for Hurricane Matthew disaster relief in Sampson County, to be used for home repair materials.

NCCF's Disaster Relief Fund was established to support mid- to long-term, unmet needs. Grants will go directly to nonprofit organizations serving the needs of local communities. NCCF's local affiliate foundations serving affected counties determine the nonprofit agencies that can best provide assistance in their areas.

NCCF has received gifts from across the state, country and even the world, according to NCCF CEO Jennifer Tolle Whiteside. No portion of the funds will be used for the Foundation's administrative or operational expenses, an approach NCCF is also encouraging among local grant recipient agencies.

"We are so grateful for the ongoing generosity we continue to witness since we activated the NCCF Disaster Relief Fund," Tolle Whiteside said. She said that NCCF especially wanted to acknowledge the generosity of the Tides Foundation, on recommendation of the Google Foundation; AT&T; F.N.B. Corporation; the Humana Foundation and the Oak Foundation.

About the North Carolina Community Foundation

The NCCF is the single statewide community foundation serving North Carolina and has made $116 million in grants since its inception in 1988. With more than $222 million in assets, NCCF sustains 1,200 endowments established to provide long-term support of a broad range of community needs, nonprofit organizations, institutions and scholarships. The NCCF partners with a network of affiliate foundations to provide local resource allocation and community assistance across the state. An important component of NCCF's mission is to ensure that rural philanthropy has a voice at local, regional and national levels.
